Paul in Jerusalem

When Paul arrived in Jerusalem, his enemies accused him falsely and sought to kill him. When he was rescued by the Roman soldiers he told the people the story of his conversion. The next day he was called to address the council. The chief captain brought Paul to the castle for safety. When a band of men made a plot to kill Paul it was discovered by Paul's nephew, who told the Roman captain. Paul was sent to Felix, the governor at Caesarea.
